THE TORIERS DOWNED

The English Government Defeated on an Amendment to the Local Option Bill.

AND FEARS EXPRESSED

That the Government Will go to Pieces on This Bill Before Many Months.

IN PARLIAMENT

The Government Defeated on an Amendment to the Local Option Bill.

LONDON, June 19.—The government announced a defeat today in the house of commons over an amendment to one of the clauses of the local government bill dealing with police regulations.

Mr. John Morley offered the amendment and despite the fact that it came from the ranks of the Liberals, it was defeated by a majority of 23, in which were numbered Lord Hamilton and many Tories and Unionists, who voted regardless of party lines.

Mr. Joseph Chamberlain apparently could not bring himself to oppose the government, so he returned before the vote was taken.

Second surprise to which the government has been treated indicates a new trend of opinion, which betokens enormous difficulty in passing the bill this session.

The government has been singularly unfortunate in regard to Mr. Chamberlain's local government bill, and it is quite apparent that the measure contains several more surprises and defeats for them.

For instance, the Tories were defeated by a majority of 23, in which were numbered Lord Hamilton and many Tories and Unionists, who voted regardless of party lines.
