

QUARRELING BOYS.

Herman Jaffe Stabbed in the Side by Henry Bloom

Last evening at about 9 o'clock Herman Jaffe, the 15 year-old son of M. S. Jaffe, a liquor dealer, was stabbed and dangerously hurt, it is alleged by Henry Bloom, the young son of a First-street clothing dealer

The boys are students at the night school and for some time there has been bad feeling between them. After some words last night Bloom struck Jaffe in the side with a pen knife, producing a wound so deep that Dr. McMahon was unable to decide immediately whether or not the kidney had been cut.

Young Bloom was arrested and locked up in the city prison.

This morning young Bloom appeared in Justice King's court for arraignment. The father of the injured boy, M. P. Jaffe, also appeared. The latter had already sworn to a complaint charging the defendant with committing an assault with a deadly weapon.

At the arraignment, however, he asked that the charge be withdrawn, stating that it was a trifling matter, and his boy's condition was very much improved this morning.

After mature consideration of the matter Justice King granted Jaffe's request dismissed the complaint, when the defendant was discharged.
