

OPENED A GRAVE

An Ugly Story Concerning a Young Doctor Is Disproved.

Permission was given by the coroner and health department yesterday for the removal of a man named Vawter, buried in the Adath Jeshurun cemetery, near Lake Harriet, nearly four years ago. The whole matter has caused considerable agitation in Jewish circles. A story had circulated that the body was missing, and a young Jewish doctor was said to be responsible for its disappearance. The body was found in the grave, however, and the young man was exonerated. He now expects to institute a big damage suit.
