I. Freimuth's Great Store Thrown Open to the Public.

ALL DULUTH THERE

Whole City Turns Out to the Grand Reception in the Evening.

All Duluth was at the I. Freimuth store last evening. For nearly three hours the people thronged the aisles on the lower floor, the second floor and the basement and even penetrated to the engine and dynamo rooms to see the machinery. If there had been any way to get on the roof they would have been there, so anxious were they to see everything and so delighted were they with what they did see. It was an immense crowd and it was small wonder that several times during the early evening the doors had to be temporarily closed. If they had not been the crush from outside would have made the inside a solid mass of humanity unable to move and there would have been serious damage. The street was crowded in front of the building until at one time the mass of people extended almost across the street. Inside the store they surged back and forth viewing the pretty things, listening to the orchestra and having a thoroughly interesting and pleasing time. They pushed and shoved their way here and there, elbowing and kneeling and nosing their way through, jostling, bustling and jamming, but through it all good natured and laughing. The men seemed to be as much interested as the fair sex and there were about as many of them.

The interior of the store was a handsome picture. Hundreds of electric lights shed their bountiful radiance in every part and mirrors reflected the light in flashing colors. The store was handsomely and effectively arranged, the combination of goods displayed being such as to give the store great beauty and picturesqueness. Long strands of ground pine ran from pillar to pillar and throughout the store there were potted plants, palms and cut flowers and the excellent work of the florist was everywhere in evidence.

In all this throng of people Mr. Freimuth was everywhere and his face pictured the happiness and satisfaction which he felt. The friendly and congratulatory greetings of the people pleased him immensely and when during the evening a large number of his brother merchants of the city called and tendered their congratulations and expressed their pleasure at the addition of such a handsome and up-to-date store to the business of Duluth, he was very much gratified to express his thanks to all. Throughout the evening Mr. Freimuth gave his personal attention to the handling of the crowd and with the assistance of his able force there was no confusion and everything passed off smoothly and successfully. J. D. Suttler, the manager of the store, was in charge at the entrance and directed the crowd in the most judicious manner to avoid most confusion. W. A. Hella, the advertising man, whose effective advertising has done much for the store, called the attention of the people to the opening with assurance and was delighted with the popular turnout.

The doors opened at 7:30 o'clock and the rush men began. The orchestra was stationed in the balcony at the rear, where the cashiers and wrapping departments are located and throughout the evening played popular airs and rendered a set program as well.

The store opened for business yesterday morning and all day there was a great throng of buyers, and handsome souvenirs were presented to those who visited the store. In the evening no goods were sold and everything was given over to the great reception.

Tonight the reception will be repeated and Flaeten's orchestra will again be there and render a fine program at the great reception. The program is as follows: March—"Impassioned Davis"; Mills' Overture—"Mishigoni"; Auber's "Air de ballet"; "Langueurs"; "Races"; (Valse Caprice); Kretschmer's Selection—"The Merry Bride"; Scharner's Characteristic—"Vision"; Blon Grand finale from the "Martyrs"; Entrées and waltz from Delibes' "Ballet d'opéra"; "Tobal Galop"; "Don Presto"; Godfrey. There was almost as much interest outside the store in the window displays as there was inside. It is liberally provided in this respect and the window displays are a great feature. They extend along two sides of the building, the Superior street front and the Lake avenue side. They are all large and handsome and admirably arranged for the display of such a stock as the Freimuth store carries. These windows have been beautifully decorated for the opening. The most beautiful and the one that catches the eye quickest is the millinery, cloak and suit window on the Superior street front. The window dresser has achieved an artistic triumph in the decoration, and it is little wonder that it was constantly the center of an admiring crowd all evening. The lighting was perfect and added marvelously to the effectiveness of the display. The shoe display is made in two windows at either side of the entrance to that department.

Adjoining the millinery window are the kid gloves and fans. In the vestibule window there are beautiful all-over laces and lace neckwear. At the Lake avenue side of the entrance is the window in which are displayed samples of the handsome stock of dress silks. Then comes muslin underwear and corsets, and at the corner dress goods. In the latter window there is a handsome Easter dress of such a stock as the Freimuth store carries. Next come the linens, napkins, towels, etc., then the underwear and hosiery.

A HANDSOME EMPORIUM.

Brief Sketch of the Store and Career of Mr. Freimuth.

I. Freimuth, the proprietor of this new store, which has just been so auspiciously opened to the people of Duluth, is a type of the successful merchant of the cities of the West. He came to Duluth in the spring of 1883 from Towanda, Pa., where he was in business with the Abelers brothers, now resident elsewhere. He bought the business of Campbell & Smith and established the firm of Freimuth & Abelers. The Metropolitan block which Mr. Freimuth has just vacated, was the home of the firm, but it did business in one room 50 by 90 feet in size. In the spring Mr. Freimuth bought the interest of his partners and the store has ever since been under his sole ownership. The business grew rapidly and in 1888 the store room was increased in depth to 140 feet. In 1892 two more floors were added and Mr. Freimuth was occupying the three floors, 50 by 140 feet in size. That increase sufficed for a time, but the growing business made even that enlargement seem insignificant before a few years. More room became absolutely necessary and about a year ago Mr. Freimuth began to look about for a new location. After considerable negotiation and consideration the Fowler building at Lake avenue and Superior street was selected and the store was moved to the new property owners and business men. The fact that rents were raised on all buildings around there this spring is no small testimonial to the importance of Freimuth's establishment.

Under the contract which Mr. Freimuth made for this store the interior was modeled to suit his desires. A force of men worked on the building for several months getting it ready and finally turned it over in its present complete and excellent arrangement. It is a model store, equipped in every way for the successful handling of a great business and for the convenience and comfort of the patrons. Mr. Freimuth is a modest man, but little given to boasting of his own achievements, but if he takes a great pride in this store it is little to be wondered at. In seventeen years single handed he has brought his business to what it is. Close application, indefatigable industry, honesty in his dealings and a shrewd appreciation of the needs and desires of the buying public have been responsible for his success. It would seem to be a satisfying career, but Mr. Freimuth is not yet content. He has still larger things in his mind and looks forward to the day when his store will be added and the present store enlarged and it may be at no very distant date. He had in mind the growth and future of Duluth—in which he has always had unlimited confidence—and at the time he made the lease of the building for he provided for enlargement by the addition of a second story while it is a great store it has not yet reached its limit.

One of the most striking features of this new store is the fine light which it sheds. The sun sheds its splendid light in all parts of the store and there is no light like that of the sun, even though electric light has been used. At night there is a brilliant electric illumination that penetrates every nook and corner.

The general arrangement of the store is very fine. The main entrance is on Superior street at about the center of the building and is double, there being large doors on two sides with a handsome vestibule display between. At the left of the entrance and extending to the corner at Lake avenue are the silks and velvets. Directly in front of the entrance is the department of art goods and opposite it that of jewelry, silverware, etc. Proceeding toward the Lake avenue wall one comes next to the ribbon and handkerchief department and opposite it the fancy neckwear and lace and embroideries. Beyond the latter are the dress trimmings, chiffons and all over neck and vests. On the right side of the department and across a large aisle is the department of black and colored dress goods and this extends along the entire Lake avenue wall of the first floor of the store. Coming back to the entrance and proceeding to the right the department of kid gloves, umbrellas and parasols is found next the Superior street side. In front of this and adjoining the jewelry department are the drugs and opposite this the gent's furnishings.

At the westward side of the lower floor is the shoe department and it has been given a large and spacious place. A street entrance has also been provided for the shoe department. Just beyond are the northwest corner of the room is a stairway leading to the ladies' rest room. This is a very pleasant little gallery overlooking the entire lower floor. It is comfortably arranged, fitted with chairs and will prove a very popular place with the shopping ladies.

The elevator is stationed near the stairway. It is large and commodious and is provided with a double door, a new feature in this city. In front of the elevator, and in a very nice arranged place, is the cut flower department. This is a new feature, and will be very popular. Just beyond are the candies, and next them the patterns. These are on the half of the lower floor, next the Michigan street side, and proceeding eastward the stationary and celluloid novelties. In the next aisle is the hosiery and underwear, then the notions and buttons, then the dress linings, and finally the wash goods. In front of these aisles are cases with pocketbooks, belts and leather goods. In the rear of the room, and next the Michigan street side, are the linens and white goods, domestics, blankets and comforters.

THE CASE

Most Interesting of the Section Thirty Cases Settled By Supreme Court.

IRON COMPANY WINS

Hyde, Who Once Refused $75,000 For the Land, Loses All.

Beaten in the court of last resort, Thomas W. Hyde, the most famous and most picturesque litigant whose cause ever had a place on the court calendars of this district, is out of the "section 30" case. The supreme court at Washington yesterday decided against him the case of the Bishop iron company against Thomas W. Hyde, and the litigation over the so-called "Hyde forty" is over.

For years Hyde has regarded himself as potentially a millionaire, believing that his vast undeveloped deposits of iron ore. Thirteen years ago he indignantly refused an offer of $75,000 to relinquish the claim and leave the field clear to the Minnesota Iron company. Why should he take a paltry sum like that when he expected to get the whole property soon? Since then the fight was waged steadily, in the courts of the state and the department of the interior, and through every court from the state supreme court of Minnesota to the supreme court of the United States. In all nearly $250,000 has been spent in litigations during the years in which the battle has progressed. Various parties have been interested from time to time. Attorneys have taken up themselves upon it have abandoned it to others. Through it all Hyde has stuck, he has not flinched, he has not wavered, he has not given up. When his money gave out and he could no longer fight in the land office, he went to Washington and tried the effect of a personal appeal to the secretary of the interior, without avail.

Hyde claimed that he settled upon the site of the swk of section 30, 63-11, August 1886, and that he resided on that property up to 1886. He also claimed three adjacent parcels. In July, 1888, he applied to the land office to make a declaratory statement on the land. The application was rejected as to all but the section 30, and he was allowed to remain on that forty. A half-breed named Warren was subsequently allowed to file a claim on the land and upon finding that out Hyde immediately filed contest, alleging prior occupation, residence and other facts. At the hearing it was disclosed that Hyde had entered into an arrangement with another person whereby he should be shared by that person, and he could not, therefore, take the oath prescribed under the pre-emption law to the contrary. In 1884 a patent was issued to Warren, and the Bishop iron company, which means the Minnesota Iron company, acquired its title through him.

In 1886, after the case had been all through the land department and Hyde had lost at almost every point, the case was brought into the courts. The Bishop iron company began a suit in ejectment against Hyde, and in his answer Hyde again set up his claim. The plaintiff demanded the answer and counterclaim, and Judge Moer sustained the demurrer. In the supreme court of Minnesota the case was then upheld, and Hyde took an appeal to the United States supreme court, which tribunal took the case under advisement about two months ago. Yesterday the decision was reached, and it was in Hyde's favor.

Hyde has been off the forty since 1886, however, though for years before that he had been steadily living on it as a resident there. When the court issued a writ of ejectment against Hyde there was some talk of getting it served. Hyde had sworn that he would kill the first man that attempted to serve any kind of process on him, and it was evident that he meant it. The writ was handed to the sheriff of Lake county, a man of 40 inches in height, weighing 160 pounds, and altogether a magnificent specimen of physical manhood. But he had heard of Hyde's threat, and though he was told that Hyde was in Ely and he would have a clear field he professed a reluctance to perform the duty. The sheriff of the Minnesota Iron company had one of its own men sworn in as a deputy sheriff of Lake county, and he went up to the Hyde forty. There he set to work, and in a short time Hyde's personal belongings were set carefully over in a pile on an adjacent forty.

It is a little strange to say, Hyde's old home, which he had lived during all of his years on the claim, burned to the ground. Hyde was furious and threatened damage suits and various sorts of vengeance. He was told, however, that there was an accident because the building had been struck by lightning. Three months later, in the winter, the new cabin in the Ely city had put up aught here, and the deputy had barely time to get his wife and baby out before the house to the ground. Hyde had referred to the committee for further consideration and a resolution was adopted by which the fire department loaned $3000 from the general fund to pay the salaries of the fire department, which have been due but unpaid for ten days.

A resolution was adopted allowing 35 per cent settlements on the city's delinquent assessments against property to be sold at the coming forfeited tax sale. Most of the property affected was left over from the last year. It was thought by the aldermen that unless the city was able to effect some sort of a compromise on the assessment, it would be forced to take up the matter with the city not receive a cent. The compromise was admittedly low, but 35 per cent of the assessment was considered better than nothing.

path soft. Keep the roadbed of the path dry and roll a few cinders into the clay, and the path will remain in good condition with little or no attention. The condition of the path today will bear me out in the repair bill. The work can be done in any part of the path that nature has provided a drain for it, the condition is better than when first made. There is plenty of cinders out at the pumping station. I think if the city water department is approached in the proper manner all the material could be had close at hand, which would be no small item in the repair bill. The work can be done in a thorough manner much less than it cost last year. The writer will donate a subsidy of $10 towards the object sought—that is, repairs to our only cycle path.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—No sooner was the scrap over the city election ended than one for the city appointments began. There seems to be a hotter contest for the city attorneyship, now held by C. J. Mahan, D. R. Pierce, A. T. Cole, D. A. Lindsey and W. P. Miller, all are credited with being after the position. The city is not usually involved in a great amount of litigation and, outside of some advice tendered at council meetings, the position is regarded as a sinecure.

J. M. Rowe, the present city auditor, although in an approval of the present executive, is slated for a trip into private life. It is claimed that he has been unable to locate the work without considerable assistance.

C. B. Wade, the city assessor, will, it is claimed, continue in office. During the campaign the opposition made the biggest light on the mayor because of the assessment made by him in 1898. Wade has charges of tax-dodging and failure to assess personal property were filed.

Bismarck—States Attorney Allen has secured a statement from Ira Jenkins, one of the suspects in the Stark murder case. The young man's father made a confession a few days ago, stating that his son had killed Stark, and now the young man says Stark was choked to death by his father. Authorities do not place any credence in the statement of the son.

The board of trustees of the state penitentiary has fixed the prices of twine at 10¢ cents for carload lots and 11¢ cents for less than carload lots for the season. The board has also promulgated rules for the guidance of purchasers of twine.

SOUTH DAKOTA. Yankton—The 2-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Harding, of Wakonda, was burned to death. It was left alone in a room with a light lamp for a few moments and when the parents returned its clothing were in flames. It was burned so severely before the fire was extinguished that death shortly ensued.

Miller—Richard Owen, who a year ago as school treasurer of York township, left with a shortage of several hundred dollars, has been arrested in California and will be brought back here at once.

FIX UP THE CYCLE PATH.

Work That the Good Roads Club Should Attend to.

To the Editor of The Herald: The writer would like to enquire through the medium of The Herald, what has become of the Good Roads club, dead or alive? Let us hope for the latter; if so there is hope, with the help of our lovely spring, they will wake up and not continue to play the Rip Van Winkle part longer. Spring is here and plenty bad roads as well as streets. The city has been about to take up the repairing problem for Superior street. I think the time is opportune for the good roads club to get together and get the question late and early, and not let the cycle path for Lester Park, the city's new pumping station put in good condition. With the path in good shape there is about ten miles of the finest road in the state for wheels. It is quite evident the wheel merchants had not continued to play the good market for that line of goods, as they all have bright, big, new stocks opened up. Why they do not help the good roads project along with their mate? The writer has ridden over the cycle path numerous times in all kinds of weather, and has carefully noted the effect of rain storms on the roadbed. I wish to see a few suggestions as to repairs to the path. Last spring there was a lot of cinders put upon the path, but there was no provision made to keep them there, and as left the work was about as good as not done at all. The sand is all rolling and easily drained in the bad places. There should be a small ditch on the upper side and running parallel with the same. There are about a half dozen places where a small ditch leading to the gutter or low places would prevent the water flowing over the path and washing off the cinders and cutting grooves through the clay and also making the
