Conditions in South America-

He's Now at Snelling.

Lieutenant C. H. Lieonori of the Twen-ty-first United States Infantry, now quartered at Fort Snelling, has just returned from South America, where he had an infrom South America, where he had an in-teresting experience in trying to enter Venezuela, through the blockade. It was the intention of Lieutenant Leonori who was on leave, to attach himself either to the Venezuelan govern-ment forces, or to the revolutionary forces. This he was unable to do on ccount of the opposition of the Germans, who were masters of the situation. "I was in Venezuela just one day," said leutenant Leonori. "The Germans Lieutenant Leonori. were still blockading the port, although there was no fighting. The Germans would not permit me to enter the port for some time, and when they finally allowed me to go in, they requested that I leave the next day. The English seemed a little ashamed of being mixed up with the Germans in the matter, although they all regarded the Monroe doctrine as a piece of impertinence.

"Many of the Boers who were held as many of the Boers who were held as prisoners at Bermuda during the war in South Africa, have settled in Venezuela. They were more bitter against the Germans than against the English. "When I found it was impossible to get into Venezuela, I went to Colombia, and spent some time there, afterward taking a trip along the route of the Panama canal. The Colombian revolution is effectually suppressed, but I was told that if the insurrectos had held out a week longer they would have won. Colombia conservative government, and the church has immense political power. For that reason the foreign residents of Colombia generally hoped for the success of the revolution. One French girl, whose family owned gold mines in Colombia. armed and equipped a force of 3,000 mer to aid the Colombian insurgents. An Army of Boys.

"I saw a good deal of the Colombian army, which is mostly composed of boys. It is pretty hard to estimate the strength of those South American armies, because told of one Colombian general who drew or tried to draw, pay for 25,000 men. He was asked to send 10,000 men to meet a force of insurgents, and replied that he

Colombian soldiers get about $1, Colombian money, a day, and find them-selves. As $9 Colombian money equals $1 American, you can judge how high the soldiers live, especially as they do not always get their money. One soldider told me he had not received any pay for more than a year. A pleasant custom they have in many South American armies is to equip young boys with knives, and let them follow the army, to cut the throats of the wounded.

The new school of opera will be a great help to the many operatic aspirants in Minneapolis as well as the northwest and it will give an impetus to musical life. It will open next week in the Dayton build-ing. J. A. Watkins will have charge of the physical culture and delsarte classes. While the regular operatic course will include a thorough drill in the traditions and history of opera, Mr. Madeira has planned other work for those students who have neither the time nor the money to devote to a thorough operat He will form evening classes for the study of opera choruses such as "The Bohemian Girl," and "Martha," taking one book a month, and in time will present thes operas, with the entire cast, chorus and rincipals from the pupils of the school Costumes and scenery will repeat tho sed at a professional presentation and the traditions of the stage will be fully preserved. These chorus classes vill give the students a practical working knowledge of chorus work and they wil have no difficulty in finding their way into the ranks of any first-class opera com pany, and when they are once on the stage their future depends on themselves. for a chorus singer can very easily show

BUILDING IN JANUARY

General Falling Off in Permits Is Shown—Minneapolis Makes Gain The building operations for January in twenty-three cities show a decrease of cent, as compared with a year ago. Considering the large amount of building for several years past a larger figure would not have been strange. Permits were taken out in these cities for the construction of 4,345 buildings, $15,428,274, against 4,507 buildings, to cost $15,894,501 the same month a year ago, a decrease of 162 buildings and $466,254. r 3 per cent. "Never touched me" shouted back a burglar to B. H. Standish as a bullet whistled by his head. The burglar was hastily climbing over a fence in the rear of Mr. Standish's residence, 1117 Hawthrne avenue, early yesterday morning, and he and his companion made their escape in the darkness. Mr. Standish was awakened by the sound of some one prowling about his residence. Hastily securing his revolver, he made his way to the dining-room, where he found two men in the act of ransacking the premises. As he appeared on the scene they made for the back door and he followed them. As he emerged upon the rear porch he could see the men scrambling over the fence. Taking a quick aim he fired two shots at the fleeing men, but neither bullet took effect. The men then shouted A careful inventory of the property in the house shows that the men were they insist that an extra appropriation frightened away before they succeeded.

Council Fire Dep't Committeemen Want Light on Proposed Expenditures for Hose.

Until Fire Chief J. R. Canterbury can explain to the satisfaction of Aldermen Lane and Dwyer of the council fire department committee why he is opposed to the expenditure of all of the $10,000 appropriated for fire hose for that purpose, a minority report on that subject will be forthcoming. The board of tax levy appropriated $10,000 with the express understanding that the hose to be purchased this year would cost at least that much. Chief Canterbury so informed the board. Since then the chief has assured te committee that $6,500 will buy all the hose needed now. Aldermen Dwyer and Lane are trying to find out what the chief wants to do with the remaining $3,500. They are also asking why his report as to the condition of the hose on hand is based on last spring's figures. The hose has been subject to considerable wear and tear since then, which would necessitate a larger purchase now than was then A Big Lot of Crow Balt. It is understood that Chief Canterbury wants to apply the $3,500 to the purchase which the department is sorely in need. The opposing aldermen agree that more horses are needed, but should have been made for horses.
