

BELLOCK MAY NEVER RETURN

Man Wanted in Duluth for Assault and Robbery Released At Chicago.

All available machinery of the law is being used by friends of George Bellock, now in Chicago, to defeat the demands for his presence in this city on the charge of assaulting and robbing Joseph Altman, a Bowery clothier, late in the evening of Nov. 18, according to information received yesterday by Chief of Police Troyer.

He was arrested by the Chicago police on information from this city early last week, and County Attorney McClintock prepared extradition papers to Governor Johnson. Deputy Sheriff Magie left for Chicago Thursday to endeavor to secure a postponement of the hearing against Bellock, which was set for yesterday. He did not have sufficient time in which to place the requisition papers on the governor of Illinois, and hastened to Chicago to prevent, if possible, the man's release until the papers could be issued and served upon him.

He found when he reached Chicago that Bellock had been released on bonds, secured an attorney, and began a fight against extradition.

Owing to the delay in this city in getting the papers to Governor Johnson, it is now believed that Bellock will never be returned to Duluth to face the charge against him.
