

CLEARs SOL TARAN OF LARCENY CHARGE

Sol Taran, who plies his vocation as a cleaner of clothes and who was arrested on the charge of grand larceny some days ago on complaint of Chris Mattson, was declared not guilty of the crime by Judge Parker in municipal court yesterday.

According to the story of Mattson, the accused called at Mattson's saloon and was given a suit of clothes to clean. Shortly afterwards Mattson remembered that he had left his pocketbook containing $200 in the vest of the suit. On returning to Taran's place of business only a block away, the money was not to be found. The knight of the brush and benzine denied knowing anything about the missing money at the time as he did in court yesterday and was given the benefit of the doubt.
