SMALL, but exquisitely appointed affairs, bridge predominating, featured last week's social calendar. Some of the most capable hostesses entertained and the informally was in no respect less in evidence, because of the beauty of decorations and gowns.

A series of small parties commends itself more and more to the Duluth hostesses and the forecast is for a social season to be exceptional for "good times." The down-town luncheon still holds in favor and the theater party becomes more and more popular. Society patronized extensively the Guilbert-Chevalier entertainment and the Leoncavallo concert—and shows a disposition to add to the picture at any and all desirable amusement features offered.

A good sized contingent of men and women left Duluth to root for Minnesota at Chicago and the Minnesota-Carlisle game bids fair to be a fashionable drawing card.
