

COULDN'T UNDERSTAND HOW CURTAINS WERE SOLD

"Yes sah, Jedge, that ole furniture man jes' comes in to mah house and sells mah bran' new lace curtains. I caln't see how he can do that, no-how," said Maude Davis, a negress, to Judge Parker yesterday. Maude claims that Sam Barkovich, a furniture man whom she owed for other articles, sold a pair of her lace curtains in order to get his money. The woman admitted that the curtains had not as yet been taken from her domicile by the purchaser. Judge Parker could not see cause for action until the draperies had been removed and dismissed the case.
