An Empire's

Best Paper

The Sunday News Tribune There are not many people who need to be told about the excellence of There are not many people who need to be told about the excellence of the News Tribune, Sunday or weekday, but it might be well to remind you that this paper is growing faster, getting more new subscribers, than any paper in the west, for the good reason that it is turning out the best paper in its section. Its news is always real; we do not like the scissors route, favored by competitors, and prefer the stuff that comes from the wires. The Sunday paper supplemements its news service with a splendid lot of feature matter. It is full of the best things in general and local subjects.

A Few of Tomorrow's Features:

"Making Good Women Out of Bad Girls," an article dealing with the state's method of reforming wayward girls at the Sauk Center school. The cottage being system explained. The cottage being system explained. The cottage being system explained the possibilities of educating children by means of a great amusement contrivance, with endorsements by local educators and others. "A Street Car Conversatione," one of David H. Bay's best contributions, in humorous style, to current happenings. The Pink Section: sports of the world, profusely lilustrated; chatter about the diamond, squared circle, track, turf, and all
