Frank Skala, the enterprising dealer in groceries and meats, sponsored the program put on by TEST Station Vermillion Electric Company Sunday evening. After the program Mr. Skala and those on the program indulged in a dinner party at the Forest Hotel. Those participating in Sunday's broadcast in addition to the announcers, Byrd Brownell and "Bill" Strand were Sterling and Vera Krause, Misses Florence Nicholls, Irene Thomas, Lucilla Bridson, Mary Hutar and Messrs. Joe and Wilbur Rothman and Hugo Kleemola. Long distance calls were received from parts of Minnesota and Dakota.

An error was made in the story of the concert at the Washington Auditorium a week ago given by the men of the M. E. church and at which the Sterling Quarette of Eveleth were the headliners. The names of Richard Jones and Miss Irene Thomas were omitted inadvertently. In justice to these young people who were enthusiastically received along with the others on the program of the others on the program, we wish to make this correction.

The feature of the campaign will be a national "Essex Challenge Week" which commences March 4th. During the week Essex cars will undertake every kind of test to prove their right to the militant "Challenger" slogan, says the

As can be seen by a story of Ro tary in another place in this paper, the Ely Club on Wednesday evening elebrated the birthday of the move ment in a fitting manner. The ladies of the Presbyterian church who served the dinner, had decorated the room in the Rotary colors of blue and gold and alongside each plate was a picture of the founder, Paul P. Harris, with the date of the organisation, February 23, 1905. A handsome and toothsome birthday cake with 24 candles also decorated each of the tables President Browne gave a few facts regarding the Rotary movement since its inception and also aptly called attention to its objects and aims. H. J. Lockhart commented on the growth of the order from its inception for the first ten years after which John Thompson followed through for a few years. Lewis White took up the next years and gave facts and figures on its local and international aspect. He was followed by Ed. Bolitho who summed up the achievements to the present day. All the speakers had made a study of their subject and had their array of facts and figures well in hand

MUNICIPAL BAND DRAWS A FULL AUDITORIUM—ELEGANT PROGRAM GIVEN.

Before an audience that filled the ashington Auditorium and by far the largest ever attending the free concerts given by the Municipal Band, the third of the series of twenty arranged for the season was given Sun-day and proved the best of the season so far, although Directress Helen Noah promises many more of like importance in the future.

The extraordinary large audience was more than pleased and vented their pleasure by liberally applauding each and every number. The program opened with the "National Heritage" march and was followed by an overture "New Dawn."

she illustrated musical numbers given by Sterling Krause and Glenn Powers and Miss Thomas and Mrs. Glenn Powers at the piano. Miss Loughin opened her part of the program by sketching a few prominent characters in the public eye and followed with in the public eye and followed with the illustrated song "Somewhere a Voice is Calling" and "The World is Waiting for the Sunrise," Sterling Krause singing the songs. Frank Jenko and his accordion was forced to respond to encores after each number and at one time it appeared as if Frank was to remain for the bal-ance of the afternoon so insistent was the applause. A selection from the musical romance "Sometime" which introduced many of the popular airs of the day by the band followed. The closing number was the march "Columbiana" during which two boy scouts walked to the front with the colors bringing the audience to its feet. The last strains of this stirring march also brought to the front of the stage the cornet and trumpet section in the

The directress is making every effort to have the concert programs pleasing and successful. That she is succeeding is attested to by the constantly increasing audiences and the pleased remarks by those attending For the concert on Sunday, March 3, saxophone quintette, vocal and instrumental solos and other specialties will diversify the program.
