It would seem that the yacht club was fated to have a disagreeable evening on which to introduce itself as an entertainer. But Friday evening the weather "had nothing to do with the case," for a more enjoyable time could not have been had. A program of eighteen dances was enjoyed by a large number. The Chinese lanterns which were used largely in the decorations made a beautiful effect.

Tomorrow evening Miss Hartman entertains at the Oatka Auditorium for Miss Geist, who has just returned from Europe, and Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. G. Herbert Jones will give a dance at the Lester park pavilion.

Among the most enjoyable and novel affairs of the week was the entertainment given in honor of Miss Leta Phelps, who leaves soon to make her home in Minneapolis, by Miss Margaret Taylor, at the Taylor summer home at Colbyville. The young women were driven from the car on a hay rack and a delicious luncheon was served under the trees. The guests were all from the class of 1902, to which Miss Phelps belongs, and the bunch of Marguerites, representing the class colors, corn and brown, which was placed in the center of the table, was greatly appreciated. The pretty little place cards done in water colors, and tied with corn and brown ribbons holding a marguerite, carried out the color scheme further. The following, from the Boston Herald, gives just a glimpse of the Eastern society:

"Another gay week has begun, but everything that follows must be in the way of an anti-climax, as unquestionably last week was the most brilliant of the season, if not of many seasons, at Newport. Mrs. Vanderbilt's theatrical party, Mrs. Golet's dinner dance and Mrs. Astor's ball, all within four days, make a series of events it would be difficult to surpass, if not to equal. The presence of the Duchess of Marlborough, too, has been the cause of many large dinners and luncheons.

Social Circles.

This week, however, has much gaiety, and next will be only comparatively dull. In the midst of all this one hears the warning note which will shortly develop into farewells. Signs that the beginning of the end of the season is at hand come simultaneously with the occurrence of the most elaborate entertainments. People are already planning to leave Newport, Bar Harbor and the less brilliant watering places, and go to the mountains or country. September is considered by many the ideal month for the country, and especially for the mountains. In fact, the trend of travel the past week has been from the seacoast to the mountains, where, if the weather is favorable, there will be a good season.

"All the camps at the Adirondacks are occupied, and at the Catskills and White Mountains there are large advance bookings. At Lenox, the "autumn Newport," as it is sometimes called, the indications are that, as soon as the Newport, Bar Harbor and Saratoga seasons close, there will be a gay and fashionable throng to fill the many handsome villas and the numerous hotels. The Saratoga season has already reached its zenith, and now that the races are over, the smart set who are devoted to that sport will begin to leave for the country, where hunting and shooting will take their attention. Bar Harbor has had its usual number of large entertainments, and many are already preparing to depart.

"At Bar Harbor this has been a cottagers' season. The hotels have not been as largely patronized as in former years, but all the cottages have been taken, and there has been much entertaining. There have been many yachts at the Harbor, and the racing has made the summer all the more enjoyable. In contrast to all this gaiety, the season at the watering places abroad has been rather dull. This was mostly due to the postponed coronation, which tended to keep the fashionable set in London until after that event. Since then, however, there has been quite an exodus to the continent. but Aix, Lucerne, Homburg and the various other places have been but mildly gay. Most of these resorts have become timeworn, and some of the society people, including Lady Sarah Wilson and Lady Howe, are considering going to the Transvaal, where the climate is said to be delightful."

A very pleasant surprise was given Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Simpson, of 529 West Third street, when on Saturday evening last Mr. Simpson's associate engineers of the Minnesota Iron company and Oliver Iron Mining company presented them with an elegant mahogany Morris chair as a token of their esteem. The occasion was rendered more interesting when, a little later in the evening, many of their friends gathered at their residence to commemorate Mr. and Mrs. Simpson's wooden wedding. Light refreshments were served, and the evening was spent very enjoyably.

Miss Edith Hancock entertained a party of friends Wednesday evening in honor of her thirteenth birthday. The evening was spent in music and games.
