While the heavy rains seriously interfered with building operations the latter part of August many new homes have been started during the past two weeks which will be completed for occupancy before cold weather sets in. Virginia has not had any building boom this season, but has enjoyed a prosperous growth, upwards of one hundred new homes being built during the season. This number will, from present indications, be materially increased during the season of 1906, and a pleasing feature is the fact that substantial residences are being built, showing that the owners intend making this city their permanent home.

The evening sermon will be illustrated; subject, "The Parable of the Tares." The character of Satan is strictly painted in this parable. You are cordially invited.

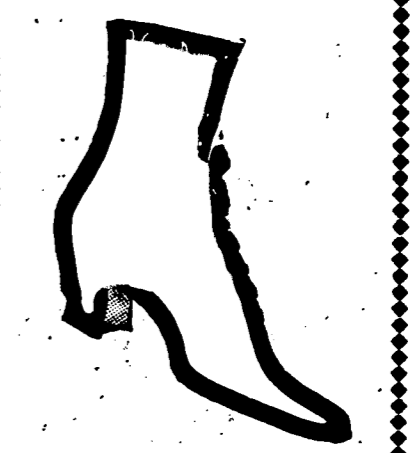

The Hibbing type-slingers have issued a "defi" to the members of the local craft for a game of ball at the Hibbing park on Sunday next. The "defi" has been accepted and the local bunch are expected to return from the village at the west end Sunday afternoon with a full license to make all the noise they wish.

Just for the benefit of the deputy game wardens and the hunters who either don't know any better or don't want to, we will mention the fact that the partridge season does not open until October 1st. This information is prompted by the sight of so many hunters who are presumably looking for mallards and red-heads in the tall timber about the city.

This is the age of cement walks, and the extension of the cement walk around the Opera House block north on the east side of Central avenue indicates that residents of that portion of the city are going to keep up with the times. These walks are proving satisfactory all over the country, and fast supersede the board and stone walks in all older communities.
