

BIG STORE VISITED BY MANY SHOPPERS

Albenberg's Has Two Floors Filled With Novelties For the Fall Season.

Two floors of Albenberg's new store in Superior street were opened to the public yesterday morning and all day delighted shoppers thronged the corridors or stood, in front of the handsomely trimmed windows. Wondering femininity is not especially concerned about the third floor, or what it may contain, the frocks and hats, and furs and novelties, and some perfectly adorable lingerie are already on display and they are content.

The gowns are truly beautiful, even for this season of beautiful things. They are made plain and rich, or dressy and richer. They are cut out with trains and are made to clear the floor; they are trimmed with yards of expensive lace, or they are left with a few straps of braid, but whatever way they are constructed there is not an unattractive model among them. They are gorgeous and correct.

A little French touch is noted on all the hats. They, too, are beautiful enough to satisfy the most exacting. A particularly attractive line of old rose hats has been placed on display and they are even more lovely than some of the darker shades of pinks. The blues and greens, as per the luxurious season of '05, are also in evidence, with the inevitable touch of gilt on everything.

A line of silk skirts, varying in design, and also in price, is artistically arranged in a large glass case and the line of lingerie waists makes one grip her resolution to "just look" pretty hard. A pale blue lawn of airiest texture embroidered with white, will live in the memory of many a woman who saw it yesterday long after lingerie waists are no more. The opening continues today.
