Edward Baxter Perry, who will give a piano recital at Steinway hall Nov. 14, has won his way to the front rank of pianists. Laying claim to no special favor on account of his blindness, he stands alone on his intrinsic merits as an artist of the highest and most conscientious order. Possessing the finest of musical instincts, he combines, with his mastery over his instrument, that rare perception of and sympathy with his composer, which constitute the chief attraction of his interpolations. Following is a list of the patronesses for the concert: Mesdames A. W. Hartman, E. S. Smith, Gustav Flaaten, Calvin How, A. Gow, George Barnum, J. F. Killorin, K. Van Loo, Charles d'Autremont, Henry Gujer, N. A. Linderberg, Blanche Sage Holcomb, H. H. Phelps, W. W. Sanford, C. B. Miller, William Prindle, F. G. Bradbury, Emma Schmied, C. S. Sheldon, L. A.
