

Raincoat Style

You see from this cut how stylish an overcoat the Hart Schaffner & Marx raincoat is. The fabrics are all wool, the tailoring is hand work, the style — well, the whole garment is Hart Schaffner & Marx made; that says it all. Come and see.

Mrs. Siegel Arrived in Fargo Last Night

Heartbroken Mother Tells of the Tragic Fate of Her Baby Boy in Mid-Ocean—The Family Reunited in Fargo.

Heart broken, and still overcome by the severe shock she received, owing to the harrowing experience she endured while en route to this country to join her husband in this city, Mrs. Abe Siegel and her two remaining children arrived in Fargo last night from Chicago.

A week ago Thursday, the Jews of Fargo were shocked by the startling information, when the steamship, the New Amsterdam, arrived in New York, that while the boat was in mid-ocean, the little 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Siegel of this city was deliberately thrown overboard into the ocean by a frenzied governess that was on board the steamer.

The news reached this city, and for a day it was kept from the father, who is in business on lower Front street, but after its confirmation it was told to the father who was almost frantic with grief.

The woman, with her two children, a boy aged 6 years, and a girl aged 4 years, arrived in Fargo. She was greeted at the depot by her husband, from whom she had been absent for two years, and other relatives. She was taken to the home of Matt Siegel, at 914 Fourth avenue south, who is a brother of the father of the child, and here she unfolded her story, giving a graphic description of the accident.

While relating the terrible experience she had, she broke down and cried as though her heart would break, for the scene was recalled to her memory, and will ever be branded upon her mind.

This morning she was seen by a representative of The Forum and through Matt Siegel, her brother-in-law, she told the story of how her little baby met its death and was interred in a watery grave in mid-ocean. Mrs. Siegel said that they had been out six days on the ocean and that from the time she stepped on board the vessel she was sick. Owing to her illness, the greater portion of the time while her children, who soon overcame the experience of being on the water enjoyed themselves playing on the deck of the ship.

On the morning of the accident the boat's physician informed Mrs. Siegel that if she would leave her room and go on the deck she would feel better. The children begged the mother to dress them so that they could go and play with the other children who were passengers on the steamship.

The pleadings of the children were obeyed by the fond mother and she went upon the deck with them.

The children on reaching the deck met others and were engaged in their play, when Miss Nagel, who was dressed in black and who, according to the officers of the boat, was a Swiss governess, came on the deck. She espied the little 3-year-old child of Mrs. Siegel playing with the other children and was attracted by his appearance. The mother was seated on the deck, being somewhat faint from her long siege of illness when the girl picked up the child out of the group of children and taking it up in her arms she hugged him, and the next thing the mother saw was the girl rushing to the edge of the deck and deliberately throw the baby overboard.

This is all she could remember for the shock was such that the mother fainted and it was some time before she recovered.

Her screams attracted several passengers who were in other parts of the deck and they, upon learning what had happened, attacked the governess. The officers of the boat reached the scene, however, before the frantic passengers could injure the girl and orders were issued to stop the boat at once. A search was made for the child, but its little body never came to the surface.

The girl was taken in charge and locked up in the hospital ward, where she was kept until the boat landed in New York.

Mrs. Siegel stated that she learned that when the girl came on board the boat at Rotterdam she began acting strangely and that she was driven out of the first-class passengers' apartments by the passengers by reason of her queer actions and her condition was reported to the officers on board, but they paid no attention to her. Throughout the entire trip she acted strangely and it was pronounced in New York when she was examined that she was demented. She will be taken back to Switzerland.

It is likely that the steamship company will be held liable for the fate of the child, owing to the fact that after the girl's condition was reported to the officers it is claimed they did not take any precaution to guard her.

The mother stated that when the girl picked up the child she thought nothing of it, for many passengers on board were fond of the child, owing to his bright and intelligent appearance and because he would converse with persons on board the boat.

When the woman told of the child's actions she broke down and cried bitterly. She said that on the morning of the tragedy the child begged to be dressed so he could play with the rest of the children and he repeatedly asked his mother how long it would be before they would reach their papa. The child had been educated to look forward to the time when he would meet his father, whom he knew nothing about further than what his mother had told him and he was anxious for the time to come when he would have his father to care for him.

Abe Siegel, the father of the child, came to America two years ago. He left his wife and three children suddenly. When he left the child that was thrown overboard was just three days old. The husband and father left his native country when he learned that he had been drafted to go to war and fight against the Japs. Rather than endure the hardships and perhaps never return to his family again, he, like many others of his countrymen, came to America.

Upon landing on this side he came to Fargo, where his brothers, Matt and Max were located and in business.

Siegel's name in Russia is Gavowsky but when the Siegel family came to this country it was found that the name was too long and hard to pronounce and they adopted the name of their mother, which was Siegel, under which name they have gone since they have been in America.

Mrs. Siegel, the distracted mother, is a bright woman and has a good education. Both of the children are well trained and the mother stated that the child that was thrown overboard was an exceptionally bright boy.

First of the Month Begins Without Police Court Business.

The first of December started out well, for during the night and early morning the police failed to round up any violators in the city and as a result of the reformation that is taking place in this city, Judge Ryan was without business this morning when he opened court. The past month has been a rather light one in the matter of police business as the number of arrests and the number of fines collected show a decided falling off from the report of the previous month.

MOORHEAD DELEGATES.

Mayor Nye Appointed Representative to Drainage Convention.

In a letter to Mayor Johnson today, Mayor Nye of Moorhead announced the appointment of delegates to represent the city of Moorhead to the annual meeting of the Red River Valley Drainage association. The delegates appointed are: S. G. Comstock, F. H. Lamb, George E. Perley, R. W. Richards, L. A. Huntoon, W. H. Davy, Jacob Keifer, W. J. Bodkin, Ole Martinson, John Erickson and C. A. Nye.

EVERY DAY.

Brings to Dakota Business College pupils opportunities which they would not be able to accept but for the training they received at that school. There have been 331 separate and distinct cases of it this year—221 last year—more next year. Now is the time to get ready.

BUYS OUT EMPLOYER.

Mr. Frank Salswedel, an old Dakota Business College boy who has been keeping books for Otto Radtke of Alico, has purchased the store. This is simply another illustration of the evolution of D. B. C. pupils in business. It pays to get a business education and be prepared for business opportunities.

A CARPENTER MANGLED

Henry Young Run Over at Valley City by a Switch Engine—Lived in Minneapolis.

Valley City Times-Record: At a late hour this afternoon, Henry Young, working in the carpenters' gang at this point, was run over by a switch engine near the coal docks and had one leg cut off near the knee and the other mangled. He suffered internal injuries which it is thought will prove fatal. Young was working on the coal docks and the escaping steam and consequent noise, made it impossible for him to either see or hear the approaching engine. He was carried to the baggage room and doctors summoned. He had not been removed as The Times-Record goes to press. The address of the unfortunate man is 218 Twentieth avenue north, Minneapolis.

Holderman's half price millinery sale is on. See announcement.

The Junior L. T. L. met at the young woman's club rooms yesterday afternoon and held a very interesting session. The principal business was the election of officers which resulted as follows:

President—Willie Bell.
Vice President—Isaac Bell.
Secretary—Grace Brown.
Treasurer—Florence Lane.

A short drill in parliamentary usage proved very helpful as well as entertaining. A series of oratorical contests is among the interesting features planned for the winter.

The Height of Comfort Munsing Well Fitting Union Suits

You will know what underwear comfort means, when you try a Munsing Combination Suit. No shirt to pull down, no pants to pull up. They fit the body. There's another good point about the Munsing Underwear: You can safely send them to your laundry without fear of having the sleeves shrink up to your elbows and the legs stay at high water mark. They shrink very little.

MINOT AFTER A NORMAL.

The Commercial Club Gets Busy on the Proposition.

Minot Optic: An important meeting of the legislative committee of the Commercial club was held last evening. Present were Chairman L. W. Gammons, T. E. Fox, Martin Jacobson, C. A. Johnson and President L. M. Davis, and Secretary Vosburgh. There were several matters taken up, among which were the scheme for a redistricting of the eighth and other neighboring judicial districts. There is a movement on foot to make Bottineau the next district headquarters east of Minot and have Governor-elect Burke appoint that staunch old democrat, A. G. Burr, to the office of district judge.

Chairman Gammons intends drafting a bill for Representative Johnson to introduce at the next legislature looking for a normal school for Minot. The citizens of Minot rightly think that it is high time that Minot and Ward county received some recognition in the way of both federal and state institutions. Every fair sized village in the state has had some kind of a state or government institution and Minot feels that the time has come when the third largest city in the state should receive that which has long since been her just due.

Other matters of lesser importance were discussed. There will be another meeting of the committee in the near future.

Minster Reported Dead.

Minot Reporter: Word reached the city last evening that Ben Dohlman, who was formerly cashier at the Grill cafe, and who just a few days ago left for Great Falls, Mont., to accept a position was killed in a passenger wreck in Montana.

A man whose name could not be learned, was in the city last night, and reported seeing Dohlman after he was killed.

STRUCK BY A TRAIN.

Stranger Badly Injured by a Train Near Moorhead.

The grim reaper still stalks along the Northern Pacific tracks in this vicinity. Another employe of the railroad was seriously injured yesterday. The victim was a laboring man. He was struck by train No. 1 near the G. N. crossing a mile east of Moorhead and hurled several rods, sustaining injuries from which it is thought he will die. Several of his ribs were fractured, his left arm was broken and his face badly lacerated.

He was rendered unconscious by the shock and has not yet recovered sufficiently to talk coherently. As no papers were found in his pockets it was impossible to learn his identity. After the accident he was taken to Moorhead, where he was placed in the Darrow hospital and given medical attention. His condition today was considered very serious and his recovery extremely doubtful.

GOOD APPEARANCE IS A SIGN OF SUCCESS

A SHOP that produced men's clothes made entirely by hand would as ill accord with modern civilization, as a shop that might spin its thread on a spinning wheel, or weave its cloth on a hand loom. Not only the spinners, but the need of our day and time calls for the use of the machine where the hand fails—not in skill but in endurance. THE CLOTHES THAT A. B. T. BUILDS fit both the spins and the need of this age. They evoke the machine where the hand fails in strength. They evoke the hand where the machine fails in skill. They spell Progress.

Good business adorn knowledge—good clothes adorn both.
