

DESERTED 5 DAYS. AFTER WEDDING

Russian Bride of Three Years Ago Given Divorce Decree
in Superior Court.

Married on Monday and deserted five days later is the story of wedded life told by Mrs. Lena Polinsky in the superior court yesterday in support of her demand for a divorce from Louis Polinsky.

They were married in Russia three years ago, after a short courtship.

Plaintiff testified that the defendant not only stole her love but that he made away with her savings. At the end of five days after their marriage the woman said the defendant took her money and came to America. She was compelled to work out and after saving enough money for her transportation she followed her husband. She met him in New York but instead of a warm greeting she said he frowned on her, refusing to live with her any longer.

While at New York the woman invoked the aid of people of her religious denomination and secured a church divorce such as is customary in Russia. She came to Superior more than a year ago and all efforts failing to bring about a reconciliation with her husband she sought final separation through the courts.

In addition to a decree Judge Smith granted the woman the right to resume her maiden name, Lena Levine. She was represented in court by Attorney H. C. Wilson.
