AT THE LYCEUM

"The Sunny Side of Broadway" amused a number of people at the Lyceum yesterday afternoon and evening.

The play is clean and free from any vulgarity and is funny in spots. The music is catchy and the principals have a stock of jokes which caused quite a bit of laughter.

Max Bloom as the funny little Jew "who had something to sell" is really clever and has good support in his comedy business.

The plot is based on the love of a college boy for a show girl and his father's opposition to the marriage. Father pays a visit to Broadway and rather likes what he sees there. He's not a bad old sport after one gets acquainted with him as is proven in the next act which is staged on the Yale campus, New Haven. All turns out well of course and the curtain falls amid a riot of color and song.

The popular musical numbers were: "Irish Honey Moon", "Meet Me at the Stage Door Johnnie," "Horse Dance," "Beware of the Garden of Love," "Under the Pazaza Plant," "My Pal From Frisco," and "When Tommie Atkins Does the Texas Tommie Dance."
