According to woodsmen and cruisers coming in from the timber in the vicinity of the towns along the line of the Canadian Northern to the north duck shooting will not be as good in that vicinity as usual this fall because of the partial failure of the wild rice crop, for which the season does not seem to have been very favorable. Local ducks are not as numerous as last season. From the same sources, however, comes the information that the pheasant shooting will be the best in years. One cruiser walking over an old logging road near Cusson recently counted over a hundred young and old birds in a territory covering little more than a mile.
