

SOCIAL SIDE OF LIFE

In part of more than ordinary was the first of the series of "Social Afternoons," given at the theater yesterday under the auspices of the Twentieth Century club. Through the drama class of the literature department. The theater was filled with an audience of the folks, members of the club and by women interested in the production of better drama entering groups of children. One of the larger parties was composed of older children from the Children's home, who were the guests of the theater management. Mrs. R. B. Smith, the reader of the afternoon, introduced by Mayor W. A. Hale, who expressed briefly his interest in the action taken by the women. Mrs. Liggett's reading of the story of Peter Pan, "the boy who wouldn't grow up," was charmingly given, and the breathless attention given the whimsically-fascinating story of the Darlings, Tinker and the amazing pirates, lost to Indians proved that the play holds its undiminished interest for childish minds. A charming musical setting for the reading was given by Kenneth Runkel, musical director of the Rex, and Miss Mary Gladys Reynolds' sympathetic soprano voice was heard in a charming song group, "Captain," "Shadow March," "Chrysanthemum," "Where Did You Come From, Baby Dear?" "Slumber Boat" and "I Once Had a Sweet Little Doll."
