

SAY MOTHER, AIDED, DESERTED HER BABE

Given Notes for $125, She Left
Child and Fled, Is Charge.

After Beccy Karon had been paid $125 by promissory notes with the understanding that she would take care of her 15-months-old child, she left it among strangers and went to Harrisburg, Pa., according to an action begun in district court yesterday by L. Karon and Ben Karon to have the notes canceled.

The two Karons, doing business as the L. Karon Iron and Metal company, executed notes for $50 and $75 in Beccy's favor, Feb. 1, 1914. It was agreed that she was to care for her child, as its father is an invalid and is unable to support his little family.

Immediately after the notes had been delivered, she left the city they say, and the child was taken by its grandfather, L. Karon, to his home. The notes are in possession of the First National bank of Duluth, and the Karon partners ask that they be delivered to the court for cancellation. District Judge Dancer signed an order citing the bank to show cause May 3 why the notes should not be canceled.
