Miss Clark to Wear Blue Bird

A blue bird will be the "something blue" on Miss Genevieve Champ Clark's wedding gown, when tomorrow she becomes the bride of James M. Thompson of New Orleans. The wedding will take place at the home of the bride's parents, Speaker and Mrs. Champ Clark, at Bowling Green, as has already been announced, and Miss Clark will live up to every word of the old-fashioned rhyme and superstition, which says "something old and something new, something borrowed and something blue."

The something old will be a handsome embroidered underskirt, that Mrs. Clark wore on her wedding day; and the "something borrowed" will be rare old lace that comes from the chest of a St. Louis matron. The blue bird that will be pinned to her frock came as a gift from Washington friends. Friends of the Clark family have already come forward with the offer to loan the bridal veil, and Miss Clark has an opportunity to select from a choice, that includes veils of plain tulle that have inherited sentiment dating back to colonial days, and veils of priceless lace, including a rose-point veil that is said to have been worn by a queen.

The wedding will be an all fresco affair, the ceremony to be held in the beautiful rose garden of the Clark home.

Talks on Art of Story Telling for Children.

"Story-telling is an art, but never more so than when one is telling a story to children. To them a story must have adventure, romance; it need not have plausibility, but if it has not simplicity, the story may go over their heads," yesterday said Miss Goodwin Thorne Thompson, Chicago expert on instruction of children, before 200 summer school students at the normal school, Twenty-third avenue East and Fifth street.

Miss Thompson came as one of the lecturers who are appearing at the normal school at intervals of a week or two this summer.

To emphasize the points she wished to clarify in regard to story-telling to children by the beginning teacher, Miss Thompson read two stories adapted for reading to primary and lower grades.

E. W. Bohannon, president of the normal, announced last night that W. P. Webster, principal of East high school, Minneapolis, would address the students this morning. Mr. Webster arrived in the city late last night.

MURAL DECORATION IN MACALISTER SCHOOL IS NOTABLE WORK BY YOUNG DULUTH ARTIST

A notable bit of mural decorating, which breathes the spirit of American work and American achievement, is that of which a glimpse is afforded to the accompanying picture, Charles St. Pierre, the young artist whose work has been winning recent favorable comment, has caught the spirit of his subject in a way that typifies the American school of art now in the making.

Mr. St. Pierre who is home for the summer from the Art Institute of Chicago, passed the preliminaries for the Grand Prix de Rome. This year, however, it was decided to have an open competition—as two Chicago men are now studying under the Prix de Rome scholarship—and give New York a chance, so that it will take one more year, under present rulings, before he wins the coveted scholarship. And win it he will, if past performances are a criterion, for Mr. St. Pierre walked away with the Brand memorial prize last season, and has won three scholarships during his five years of study at the Art Institute.

The field of mural decorating, comparatively new in America, has attracted the young artist and he will devote his gifts to this branch of art.

"People in this country have been slow to recognize the beauty of mural decoration," said he, in discussing the newer movements of art in America. "Practically all schools and public buildings of Europe are rich in this form of decorative art, but Americans are just beginning to realize its beauty."

Certainly, the fine bit of work which bears the stamp of Mr. St. Pierre's creative genius is an excellent argument in favor of the opinion held by an increasing number of art lovers, that America can produce art in its many forms which compares from every viewpoint with the over-vaunted European treasures, which we are prone to buy "not wisely, but too lavishly."
