

BOY LEAPS IN ICY LAKE; RESCUES HIS COMPANION

JOHAN ZAZULAK, age 14, rescued Harry Fagel, age 8, from Lake Superior yesterday afternoon by leaping into the water where the thin ice had collapsed under the weight of the Fagel boy.

Young Zazulak said he had been skating near the foot of Third avenue East when he saw the younger boy crash through the ice near the shore. The water was shallow, but the lad was panic-stricken and unable to extricate himself. Zazulak skated fast and easily sped over the thin ice until he reached Harry Fagel's side in the water. Then, by breaking the ice with his arms, he succeeded in reaching shore with his charge.

The boy, after being rescued, was afraid to go home and the water which had soaked into his clothing had frozen. The lad almost had collapsed on East Superior street when passers-by, attracted by the child's crying, called the police. The officers removed him to the family residence at 21 North Second ave East. Zazulak lives at 102 East Second street.
