

GOING ACROSS

HARRY MARGULIS.

HIBBING, July 11.—Friends in Hibbing have been advised by Harry Margulis, who left in May for Camp Dodge to become a soldier in the national army, that there is no place like Camp Dodge. "We all like it, and we are very much alive and kicking because we don't get started to the other side. But we're going, just put that down," he adds. He is a member of the Three Hundred and Forty-ninth infantry, Headquarters company.
