

Enter Jackie As Press Agent; He Has Real Story

NOW comes the press agent for the United States navy. Carrying a bundle of cuts and clippings under his arm and claiming, in the stereotyped fashion the "world's greatest and best aggregation" there came into the News Tribune office last night one Samuel Herman Levin, bluejacket press agent extraordinary.

Levin, seaman aboard the U. S. S. Isle d' Luzon now anchored in the Duluth-Superior harbor, was endeavoring to stir up local interest in a combination smoker vaudeville show minstrel performance to be given aboard the ship Tuesday night. Levin talked as well as any regular press agent, made the same pledges of "fun, sport and amusement," and told the city editor how important his news to News Tribune readers. The city editor agrees to that and he is printing this in the hope that Duluth people will help Levin in his hunt for costumes.

The U. S. S. Isle d' Luzon is the senior navy ship on the Great Lakes and is under command of Commander William N. McMunn. She was one of the ships captured by Admiral Dewey at Manila Bay in 1898 from the Spaniards.
