THE QUESTION.

Should Everyone Aid in Putting the Salvation Army Home Service Campaign "Over the Top."

JIMMIE BARTNESS, Alexandria hotel: "I certainly intend to do my share to help out the Salvation army. The doughnut girls did their bit for us, you know. It's the only kind of army I'm not opposed to."

ALBERT BOZNU, ex-A. E. F. service man, 418 West Superior street: "Why I don't know how I could begin to repay them for those doughnuts they fed us over in France."

PAT HINES, 511 East Third street: "Yes, I believe we should stand back of the Salvation Army and reward them for past services, thus enabling them to continue their work to the best advantage."

MISS BESSIE BRUNELL, nurse, St. Mary's hospital: "The Salvation Army helped the boys over the top in France and all these boys will do the same thing here I am sure. It is also right that the mothers, wives and sweethearts of the soldiers should further the cause which helped those near and dear to them."
