Coroner Does Not Believe in Foul Play Theory in the Julius Henz Case.

A post mortem examination today of the body of Julius Henz, 50 years old, who was found dead at the residence of John Horwitz on the Howard and Gnesen road, about 10 miles north of Duluth, Monday, is expected to show accidental death.

Coroner J. A. McCuen said last night that there appears to be nothing to substantiate the supposition of foul play.

Henz's body was found at the foot of a stairway at the Horwitz home, and death was apparently due to a fall. There were several bruises about the man's head, which might have been caused by blows from a blunt instrument.

The dead man was known in Duluth, where he has been employed irregularly for several years. The body is at the undertaking rooms of Flood & Horgan.
