

A MUSICAL PERGOLA entwined with marguerites and ground pine was an attractive out-of-door setting for the marriage of Miss Marjorie Baillie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Wangenstein, St. Marie street, and Dean Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Davis, East First street, which was solemnized yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock on the grounds of the Wangenstein home. Rev. William F. Scouler officiated.

Preceding the service orchestral selections were played. "The Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin was used as the processional and the Mendelssohn wedding march was the recessional Mrs. O. J. Larson, contralto, sang two appropriate numbers.

The ushers, Victor and Jack Wangenstein and Bruce Davis, the first of the bridal party to enter, passed through an aisle of white peonies and daisies, followed by the bridesmaids, Miss Gertrude Wangenstein and Miss Donald MacGregor. Pea green and baby pink, respectively, were the shades used for the bridesmaids' gowns, which were fashioned alike of ruffled organdie and trimmed with long loops of white satin ribbon caught at the waist line with organdie flowers. They wore organdie hats to match their gowns. The brides carried Colonial bouquets of roses and forget-me-nots.

The maid of honor, Miss Mabel Baillie of Ironwood, Mich., was attired in baby blue organdie with a foundation of white organdie. She wore a blue hat and carried a bouquet of Killarney roses. The little flower girl, Miss Olga Wangenstein, in a rose ruffled organdie dress, strewed pink and white rose petals in the path of the bride from a basket of roses and sweet-peas which she carried.

The bride, who was met at the improvised altar by the bridegroom and his best man, Stanley Grogan, was given in marriage by her father. The bride's gown was a charming model of white tulle embellished with princess lace and white ivory buttons. The myosin eye style was effected with a tight bodice and full skirt. A short tulle train, which was a quaint poke bonnet adorned with lilacs-of-the-valley. Bride's roses and lilacs-of-the-valley were used in her shower bouquet.

Assisting about the rooms of the Wangenstein home where a reception was held at the close of the ceremony were Misses Edwin Cooper, A. L. Ahlen, Herman Strom and Julius Nohr. The young girls who served the guests were the Misses Eva Alford, Grace Grant, Edna Quigley, Mary McGonagle, Alice Davis, Gertrude Miller and Marjorie Davis.

Mrs. Wangenstein, mother of the bride, was gowned in black Chantilly lace over gray crepe de chine. Pink roses were combined with lavender sweet peas in her corsage bouquet. The mother of the bridegroom wore a black silk adorned with fancy lace.

Following an eastern trip, Mr. and Mrs. Davis will be at home in Fort Pierre, S. D., after Aug. 1.

Is your child gifted with great musical talent or does he possess merely a mediocre knowledge of music which would not be worth developing? This is the subject of investigations and experiments made by Dr. C. E. Seashore, psychologist of the University of Iowa, and discussed at length yesterday by Miss Mathilda Heck at the 2 o'clock session of the convention of the Minnesota Music Teachers' association at the assembly hall of the Y. W. C. A. Miss Heck gave tests to illustrate her talk entitled, "Measures of Musical Talent."

By the aid of such tests for the sense of pitch, intensity, time, consonance and total memory, one may judge whether it is worth while for a person to study music for a vocational guidance. Any one can give these tests for they have been reproduced on five double-disc photographic records. They have been made from the standpoint of the child from 9 to 11 years of age, from that of the high school student, and from that of the adult.

Recital Given. A recital was given by local talent in which Donna Riblette, soprano; Valborg Finkelson, violinist, and Euphemia Jack Miller, pianist, were heard.
