

JUDGE IRED AT JUROR'S MEAL

Verdict Refusing "Balm" Comes After It

Superior Judge Buente Thursday suggested that compensation for jurors should be increased to allow them to pay for their own meals.

He believes it would speed up jury verdicts, saying that experience has proved in many cases that verdicts were delayed because one or more of the jurors wanted to get a free meal from the county.

The jury pay now is $2.50 per day, meals included.

The judge has a suspicion that a verdict was delayed "for a free meal" Wednesday evening in the "love case" of Mrs. Josephine Brune, who sued her friend and former neighbor, Mrs. Elizabeth Gries, for $500, charging Mrs. Gries had "stolen the love and affection" of Mrs. Brune's former husband, Fred, weighing 220 pounds.

The jury was given the case at 4:15 p. m. Wednesday and when a verdict was not rendered at 6:45 p. m., Judge Buente ordered the jurors taken to supper, saying he had an engagement and couldn't be reached until later if a verdict was reached after supper.

Within 15 minutes after the jurors had dined, a verdict was returned that Mrs. Brune was not entitled to damages.

man and talked about getting a gun and killing the physician. "I reasoned with him," Denton said, "and begged him to allow the law to take its course."

Then the prosecutor shot this question at the jury, raising his voice: "What would you men have done if your wife had gone to this physician's office and had been treated that way?"

"You would say off-hand that you would have taken a gun and would have sent him to a place where it is hotter than it is here today. But you can't take the law in your own hands that way. That's mob rule—anarchism."

Criticizes Testimony
Denton, in referring to Dr. Espenlaub's testimony on the witness stand and the manner of his answers to many of the state's questions, said: "The big—The arrogant—The man who sets himself above the law—The man who is too big to answer questions."

Edward Meyer said that Mrs. Nave had "rattled off her testimony like giving a recipe from a cook book" in an attempt to show she was not embarrassed or humiliated.

Denton's answer was that he had been in Circuit Court daily for several years and that he has never seen a witness more truthful or impressive.

"And you men," he said to the jurors, "will spend many years in a courtroom before you'll find another witness who will impress you more."

The prosecutor said the defense had failed to show any false motive for Mrs. Nave's charges. Edward Meyer had declared that he "didn't know why the charge had been brought" and that some times such cases were brought to "satisfy the unbridled ambitions of lawyers seeking fame and notoriety."

Visit of Husband
Denton later told the jury about Nave's visit to his home, saying he was glad the defense had opened the way for him to describe Nave's visit.

"There was no other motive than to tell the truth and see that justice was done," Denton said.

The prosecutor then criticized Dr. Espenlaub for "masking his lustful nature under the guise of a sacred profession," saying he has more sympathy for a man who commits an attack by force than by trickery and deception.

Enra Ireland, who assisted in defending Dr. Espenlaub, read Supreme Court decisions in similar cases and declared that the state had made no attempt to show fraud on Dr. Espenlaub's part as was shown in attack cases upheld by higher courts.

Mrs. Nave told her story late Wednesday in a quiet, even tone and in a voice which never faltered. Dr. Espenlaub, who testified later, frequently mopped his brow while Chief Deputy Prosecutor James H. Meyer, quizzed him closely for 45 minutes about Mrs. Nave's visit and his past reputation.

The physician was asked if he hadn't been forced out of the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., because of trouble with a nurse and if he hadn't been barred from operating at the Deaconess Hospital because of trouble with a woman and if he also hadn't been forbidden to operate at St. Mary's Hospital.

Dr. Espenlaub answered "no" to each question. His answers often were brusque and were attacked by the deputy prosecutor as "generalities" and "evasive answers."

When Dr. Espenlaub, after being asked the location of stirrups on his operating table and had replied that they are in the same place as on other tables, Meyer jumped angrily to his feet and said: "I don't like this defendant's attitude."

Judge Spencer, in angry tones, answered: "I intend to take a hand in this case now."

He said Meyer's comment was uncalculated.

"I've warned you once," the judge told Meyer, "and I won't give a second warning."

"Then order the defendant to answer the questions asked him and not be so evasive," Meyer asked.

On each occasion, the physician's attorney, Edward Meyer, had interposed an objection.

Mrs. Nave said she was admitted to Dr. Espenlaub's consulting room, adjoining a third room where minor operations are performed.

She removed her dress on orders of the physician and then went into the third room where she lay on the examination table.

Dr. Espenlaub, she testified, removed her under clothing.

Dr. Espenlaub previously had examined her tonsils, teeth, back and heart.

When he attacked her, she testified, she leaped up from the table and asked him what he was doing.

As she started to put on her clothes, she testified, he grabbed her, saying: "Here, you little fool. What do you mean by leaving here with half your clothing on? Do you want to ruin both of us?"

Mrs. Nave testified: "I told him my husband would see him about this and he only laughed. He had a terrible look on his face, as if 'I then walked into the reception room and told Mrs. Dorothy Whitman, 750 S. Rotherwood-av, who went with me to the office, to hurry out with me."

"On the way down the steps I told Mrs. Whitman what had happened. Then I told my husband and we called my father at Paducah. That night my husband and I went to Prosecutor Denton's office."

Denied by Doctor
Dr. Espenlaub denied the criminal attack, saying Mrs. Nave had come to him for a physical examination, that he had never seen her before and that he had found her suffering from infected tonsils, a bad heart and from a disease peculiar to women.

He prescribed no remedies or treatment, he told Deputy Prosecutor Meyer on cross examination.

He prescribed no remedies or treatment, he told Deputy Prosecutor Meyer on cross examination.

Edward Meyer, defense attorney, cross examined Mrs. Nave about her nervous condition, asking her if it wasn't true that she was highly nervous, imaginative and hysterical and that she suffered from delusions, to all of which she replied in the negative.

Dr. Espenlaub testified that the examination was made in the second room and not in the surgery described by Mrs. Nave. He also said a sheet had been used to cover her.

His office assistant, Mrs. Bessie Smothers, 715 Chestnut-st, testified that she kept a sheet under the pillow of the table in the second room but on cross examination she said no sheet was kept on the table in the third, or operating room.

Describes Appearance
Mrs. Whitman, who accompanied her to the office, told the jury that Mrs. Nave came into the reception room hurriedly after the examination and that she appeared "much excited."

She said Mrs. Nave told her immediately what had happened and that she appeared "much excited."

In an attempt to refute that testimony, Dr. Espenlaub placed Miss Vonda O'Brien, 924 S. Governor-st, on the stand. Miss O'Brien was waiting to see the physician when Mrs. Nave came out and she said Mrs. Nave did not appear excited.

She admitted, when James Meyer asked her how she happened to remember Mrs. Nave since she had never seen her before, that she had talked to Dr. Espenlaub and his attorneys about the case.

Mrs. Nave testified that prior to coming to Evansville five years ago, she had lived at Providence, Sturgis and Princeton, all towns in Kentucky.

The jury consists of: Henry J. Williams, 137 Lincoln-st.; William Dennis, R. R. 7; Arthur Mueller, 410 Read-st.; Thomas Jordan, 17 Walnut-st.; Charles Duncan, 517 John-st.; Moses Stinchfield, Cypress, Ind.; Harry Brown Bourland, 19 Washington-av.; Frank Gregor, 721 E. Tennessee-st.; Frank Jenkins, 612 Jefferson-av.; Harold Wallace, 1415 S. Evans-av.; Rufus Carnes, Washington Terrace; James M. Robinson, Boeke Road.

DEATHS
Alfred A. Morley, 60, formerly of Evansville and a native of London, Eng., died Tuesday at his home in Indianapolis after an illness of several months.

Mr. Morley was superintendent of the Life Insurance Company of Virginia here about 15 years ago. Surviving are: the widow, Alice; a son, William, and three grandchildren.

Mrs. Mary Darling, 60, formerly of Evansville, died Wednesday at her home in Madison, Ill. Her husband, George, was connected with the Fisher Grocery Company about 25 years ago.

Funeral and burial in Madison Saturday.

Memorial Services for members who have died during the past year will be held by Wakke Tribune. Improved Order of Red Men, at 8 p. m. Thursday in the wigwam, Fourth Avenue and W. Franklin Street. The public is invited.

ASKS FOR HELP IN FEEDING JOBLESS

Funds Running Short, Tabernacle Director Says

An appeal for funds to finance relief work during the summer was made Thursday by the Radio Tabernacle.

Rev. James D. Price, director, said the Tabernacle has served 35,000 meals to unemployed persons during the past year aside from helping families, and is now serving 150 meals daily to jobless men.

The work of feeding unemployed persons has increased as other organizations have discontinued feeding them during the summer, Rev. Price said.

"We are feeding only men who are worthy and who will agree to work at least eight hours a week in the Tabernacle gardens," he said. "We have six acres where we are raising some food for our work."

Rev. Price said the Tabernacle also is distributing 150 to 200 loaves of bread daily to needy families.

get thru here," Kahn added. "I hope so," said Pecora.

Kahn said he believed that the capital-profit-loss provision should be removed and that some provision written in to make the law more just.

"Then I believe the rich would pay their taxes gladly," he added. He said he believed the law fostered the selling of stocks every year for the purpose of taking losses. He said he also felt that the law "is a major reason for the inflation because people wouldn't take profit" on their stocks.

"The government has no business gambling on the country's prosperity," he continued. "This law makes inflation easier and stops the national flow of business. It is an element which injects a depression on the market."

First To Blame Bears
"You are the first witness before this committee who has stated the bears are able to depress the market," commented Senator Steiwer. (Rep. Ore.)

"Well, two times two makes four," replied Kahn. "Of course the bears have an effect on the market. And if the bear goes about seeking who he can devour, he ought to be restricted."

The strategy of influential banking interests against the Senate's inquiry was defeated by a decision of the Senate Committee.

Under the guise of co-operating with the investigation, banking institutions whose activities are yet to be examined had urged committee members to carry the hearings to their conclusion without the interruptions of recesses.

Mr. Pecora's strategy, explained to the committee, is to allow hearings to proceed for no longer than two weeks at a time, with a recess of perhaps a month or longer to permit him to prepare for the next phase.

Chairman Fletcher (Dem. Fla.) announced that the Kahn, Leeb inquiry will continue until Friday. In October the inquiry into J. P. Morgan & Company will be resumed, and the affairs of the Chase Securities Corporation and Dillon Read Company investigated.

SALES TAX FOR ILLINOIS SIGNED

Two Per Cent Retail Levy Is Effective Saturday

By United Press
SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—Gov. Henry Horner has signed a bill making a 2 per cent sales tax effective in Illinois July 1.

The tax law, the second similar law passed by the legislature, provides that retail merchants must pay the state 2 per cent of their gross sales.

The first sales tax law was passed last spring and provided for a 3 per cent tax. After merchants had collected the tax for six weeks the law was declared unconstitutional.

In signing the act Gov. Horner stated that proceeds from it from July 1 to Jan. 1, 1934, will be used for unemployment relief. After that period the sales tax money will go toward abatement of the state tax on general property.

He pointed out that the tax is in no sense a tax on consumers but affects retail merchants in the same way as rent or other overhead charges.

He stated that merchants would be permitted to charge a reasonable price for their merchandise, but warned of prosecutions for any overcharge. The tax is on the occupation of selling tangible personal property at retail," Gov. Horner explained.

Rules and regulations for enforcement of the law are being prepared by Joseph J. Rice, director of finance, for early distribution.
